DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:

- I. Claims 1-5, drawn to voltage regulator, classified in class 322, subclass 24.
- II. Claim 6, drawn to voltage regulator, classified in class 322, subclass 28.
- III. Claim 7, drawn to voltage regulator, classified in class 323, subclass 229.
- IV. Claims 8-10, drawn to voltage regulator, classified in class 323, subclass 282.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

2. Inventions I and II are related as combination and subcombination.

Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because invention I requires the voltage regulator requires of its switching capacity control means to control during a former and latter stage of a transition period, thus changing the semiconductor voltage and current at a certain rage. Moreover, invention I requires the use of a comparator for comparing a reference voltage and depending on the voltage, the charging current is set lower than a predetermined value for changing a turn off transition period; such procedures are not required by invention II. The subcombination has separate utility such as using a voltage regulator that has a charge pump boosting circuit, which supplies a semiconductor element with a higher gate voltage than an output voltage and having an operation control circuit for stopping a charge pump circuit from a turn off transition period.

3. Inventions III and IV are related as combination and subcombination.

Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because invention IV requires the voltage regulator to have a battery condition check circuit, a gate charge circuit connected to the terminal voltage check circuit for supplying gate current to the gate, a gate discharge circuit for discharging current from the gate and the gate charge circuit increasing the gate current quickly and being able to discharge the gate current quickly depending on the rising/lowering terminal voltage. Moreover, invention IV discloses using a mirror circuit connected to the control electrode of transistor, which is not required by invention III. The subcombination has separate utility such as using a voltage regulator with a diode formed of a short recovery time and specifying that the recovery period be of less than twice as long of the maximum current change rate during a turn off/on transition period.

4. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art as shown by their different classification, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper and because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.
